

A Few Thoughts from a Shepherd

There are times that God does not seem to be present in our lives. Today we are all living through one of those times – ‘When bad things happen to good people’. Whether we are experiencing health, job loss, separation from family or loved ones, loss of a loved one, or many of the other concerns throughout the world today, each of us are feeling the effects of the uncertainty in the world around us.

Times like this can try our faith, or it can strengthen it, depending on how we respond. God is the one, and only one, who is our hope and redeemer. He is the one we can call on to help us improve our patience, hope, and understanding, and enable us to help those around us who have physical and spiritual needs. These are times in which we can show and reflect the love and compassion of Christ in our communities by our behavior, compassion, and humility.
